

Chapter Two

Countywide

Assessment

163.3191.2.a Florida Statutes

2.1 - Population growth and changes in land area, including annexation, since the adoption of the original plan or the most recent update amendments.

Since the 2004 EAR, the city of Naples has had six annexations comprising a land area of 441.42 acres (.69 square miles). Five out of the six annexations were of non-residential land uses or vacant residential, with the exception of the Moorings Park Mixed Use development that resulted in a slight decrease in the unincorporated population and increase in the City's population. The Moorings Park Mixed Use development is a pre-planned retirement community authorized for 594 residential units, ranging from single family detached units to individual patient rooms, the estimated population for the development is no more than 800 persons. For the municipalities of Marco Island and Everglades City, there were no annexations during the evaluation period.
